

ME, MUMBLING

Now that exams are in the offing, perhaps it would be well to keep the following story in mind.

He didn't know a single thing about the course, so he kept himself awake by devious means for three nights and three days, and studied. When he went in on the fourth morning to write the exam he knew all that there was to know. He wrote a whole bookful, and filled the half of another, went home exultingly, because no one else had managed to write nearly as much, and promptly fell asleep.

When the results were posted he found himself at the foot of the list. He enquired the reason of his professor, and the professor showed him his paper.

He had filled one and a half books with his own name, writing it over and over again continually!!!!

(And the person who told Me this swears it's true.)

C.D.E. says: The British are naming their ships after jokes, to ensure that the Germans won't see them.

English as she is spoke:
There was a young lady named Psyche,
Who, after much thought, exclaimed,
"Percyche,
I'm sure I should pluck
To embrace my dear Pmych,
If only his beard weren't ppsyche."

The perfect gentlemen: "May I hold your coat while you have it on?"

Mike wants to know: Who is the professor in the School of Commerce who blushes to mention the word "emotion" in his class of six males, and who turns from red to green to purple if any one else even hints at it?

The sergeant was calling the rolls: "Windor," he yelled.
Before he could go further someone broke in with:
"McGill College, avancez en avant!"

Department of Ancient Humour:
It is said that when Queen Victoria saw her effigy at Madame Tussaud's, she was beside herself. (1843)

Did you hear about the man who went hare-hunting? His wig was blown off. (1844)

Why is a corset like a good governess? Because it brings you up the way you should go. (1847)

Isn't it wonderful how beauty inspires the artist? One professor never draws such beautiful curves for his graphs as when he demonstrates to his front row of lovely but uncomprehending young ladies.

Another anthem, so someone tells Me, runs:
We like sheep, we like sheep,
We like sheep are gone astray.

There was a deathly silence as they waited for the provisional lieutenant to say something. He stood there, licking his lips, striving in vain to remember the number of the platoon. Finally he took the fatal plunge.
My platoon, he quavered, halt.

The Rev. Cameron Speaks On Divine Challenge

At the Chapel service in Divinity Hall last night the Rev. Alice Cameron spoke on "Divine Challenge." Men have been challenged by God in all ages, he said, and we face a divine challenge today. Remembering that the acts of men, and not the Bible or any other book are the word of God, we face certain responsibilities today: the challenge, he said, was to rid men of the oppression of the power of wealth, and in doing that we would have to expect conflict. We would have to develop our own judgment, and not rely on any authority, and we would have to work together with all groups that were striving for the new world. Only as far as we were in the struggle ourselves could we expect to mould a Christian New World, he concluded.

Dentals Begin Final Session

Third Year Ends Eight Months Prematurely

McGill University today announced that under its wartime speed-up program the third year dental students had been promoted to the fourth and final year eight months ahead of time. These students, who studied all last summer, would not normally enter their final year until next September.

The students who have been promoted and who successfully completed their final year's work will receive their degrees in dental surgery next October instead of the usual time in the following May.

Exams Completed

Members of the present final year class have completed their examinations. The names of the successful candidates will be made known following a meeting of the Senate next week. There will thus be two graduating classes this year, one class receiving delayed degrees in May and another graduating in October.

In the results issued for third year dentistry today, Peter A. Ostapovich, of Theodore, Sask., won the prize for the first rank standing.

I.S.S. Drives At Macdonald

Campaign Quota Set at $2.50 Per Student

An I. S. S. Campaign for $600 has been started at Macdonald College and until last Saturday $200 has been collected.

This drive for funds which started on the celebration of Founder's Day, last Wednesday, is asking for an average of $2.50 from each student. The campaign will run for a month and will end on March 10th.

Saturday afternoon a fencing show was held to which an admission fee was charged. All returns from this benefit will be donated to the International Students' Service. The amount collected has not as yet been reported.

This drive is being sponsored by the Students' Council of Macdonald College, and is being held under the patronage of the Dean. Raffles, benefits and dances such as the Valentine dance which they recently held, will take place in the very near future. It is expected that the full amount required will be collected before the end of the campaign.

Reserve Unit Will Parallel COTC, UATC Organization

Kingston. — (C.U.P.) — It was announced last Friday at Queens University that a meeting is projected for Friday to discuss the setting up of a Naval Training Scheme at Kingston. The meeting will be composed of the University Military Board, Lieutenant A. W. Baker, the officer who has been largely responsible for the establishment of these Naval Reserve Units, and Lieutenant H. Webster of H.M.C.S. Catarqui, Kingston.

The outlines of the project stand as follows: An University Naval Training Division will be established at Queens next autumn. Men wishing to join Navy on graduation will be enlisted as ratings and exempted from military call-up in the same manner as those who belong to the C.O.T.C. or the U.A.T.C. They will take the same number of hours of training as the other two divisions, and in addition will undergo two weeks of training during the summer months at some coastal port.

Training Divided.

Although full details on the subject have not yet been announced, it is expected that the ratings will take some part of their training at the University and part of it on the Catarqui. The instructors will be provided by the Divisional Headquarters, and some member of the University staff will be recommended as Officer Commanding. A three years training program is being worked out.

It has been proposed that men leaving the University this year be afforded the opportunity of joining immediately, so that they may have the benefit of the experience when they enter the Navy upon graduation in the spring.

Nucleus Proposed.

It was further proposed that 25 students be permitted to join this year so that they may form the nucleus of next year's division. These would take no training during the session, but would undergo the two weeks summer training mentioned above. If they are accepted, they will have to break any ties they may have with the C.O.T.C. or U.A.T.C., and make any necessary arrangements with those two groups.

No Officer Training.

No one will be enlisted for officer training, though all recruits will be given the opportunity of earning their commissions. However the Navy makes no guarantee that any person enlisting will be granted an officer's standing.

Uniforms will be provided to the ratings, as has been done for the members of the other University military groups.

The military committee at Queens has expressed the sentiment that "The Military Committee welcomes the opportunity of having Naval Training on the Campus."

Withdrawal Possible.

It was further pointed out, that while those who take this training will be automatically enlisted into Navy Service, they may, if they feel they will be more important in some other field of war work, request their withdrawal from the scheme.

McGill To Have U.N.T.D.

A plan for the formation of a University Training Division has been approved by the Senate of McGill University, it was announced today.

The new naval unit will officially be part of the complement of H.M.C.S. Montreal, which is commanded by Lieut.-Comdr. M. R. Campbell, R.C.N.V.R., who admitted this morning that he had been in touch with McGill University in connection with the plans.

Lieutenant-Commander Campbell also stated that the arrangements envisage the appointment of a member of McGill as the officer in charge of the unit, as has been usual in connection with the C.O.T.C. and the University Air Training Corps. Word was now being awaited from naval headquarters as to when the plan would go into operation.

Must Join R.C.N.V.R.

The members that will form part of the new unit will depend upon the response from the student body, but it is believed that it will be close to 100 at the start. Any male students not already enrolled in the C.O.T.C. or U.A.T.C. will be eligible to join the division and train for the remainder of the present session provided that they agree to enter the R.C.N.V.R. or to join up for active service with the naval forces of Canada at the conclusion of their work at the university.

H.M.C.S. Montreal is expected to supply the instructors for the training of the students who join the new unit. Later, it is believed, the University of Montreal will be invited to co-operate in the scheme and form part of the complement of H.M.C.S. Cartier here.

Founder Feted At Macdonald

Philanthropist Donated Many McGill Buildings

Macdonald College celebrated the birth-date of the man to whom it owes its existence last week. Sir William Macdonald, as well as establishing the college at St. Anne de Bellevue, was responsible for many of the buildings on the McGill Campus. Herewith an account of his career:

Sir William Christopher Macdonald was born in Glenaladale, Queen's County, Prince Edward Island, one hundred and twelve years ago. He was the son of the Hon. Donald Macdonald and the grandson of the eighth chief of the Clan Macdonald of Glenaladale, Scotland. He was educated at the Central Academy in Charlottetown and after finishing his academic training set out for Boston and there began his business career. He soon wandered to New York and later to Montreal as a commission merchant and ultimately entered the tobacco business, although he never smoked himself but despised the "filthy weed."

Sir William's good Scotch background proved its worth and he amassed a considerable fortune.

Labour Club to Sponsor Forum

Wartime Task Of Universities Is Debate Topic

"The Function of a University in Wartime" will be the topic for an open forum of the Student Labour Club on Thursday, at the Union Grill Room.

The list of speakers includes Prof. Thomson, Dean of the Faculty of Graduate Studies and Research, Dr. Boyer of the Chemistry Department, Dr. Howes of Electrical Engineering and Dr. Steinberg of the Genetics Department. Prominent citizens, as well as all students interested in the matter, will be given a chance to express their views.

The position of students in other Allied countries will be dealt with, and there will be a discussion of Selective Service in its relation to university manpower.

The club executive states that it hopes that points raised at the forum will not be immediately forgotten, but will become the basis of further discussion and action.

Dating Bureaus Arranged For Servicemen, CWACS

Masquerade Admits Allied Warriors at Special Rate

The Cosmopolitan Club has now completed arrangements with the McGill Hospitality Centre for the armed forces to set up a dating bureau through which McGill students can invite members of the armed forces or of the various women's auxiliaries to accompany them to the Annual Masquerade Ball on Friday, Feb. 26. In addition to this, the club has also set aside 40 tickets to the dance for members of the fighting services of the United Nations from overseas. These are also being distributed by the Hospitality Centre, and are being sold at the specially reduced rate of $1.50 otherwise only applicable to club members.

Students' Tickets Rationed.

The outcome of this is that there will only be 160 tickets left for sale to the student body, and to ensure a fair distribution, the committee is rationing them out among the various campus groups in the following proportions:

Club Members	70
Union Tuckshop	30
Engineering Building	25
Arts Building	20
Medical Building	15

If after the remaining tickets have been with the Hospitality Committee for one week, any should still be unsold, they will then be returned to the club and will be put at the disposal of McGill students through the Union Tuckshop.

Girls May Arrange Dates

Any students, whether men or women, who do want to take this opportunity of entertaining the troops can arrange dates for the evening with servicemen or servicewomen through Gus Richter, the Chairman of the Hospitality Committee, either at Co-op House (3609 University St., LA. 6307) or at S.C.M. House (3574 University St., PL. 1150).

Masquerade Described.

While emphasizing that the Masquerade was an essentially costume affair, indeed the only big annual costume affair on the campus, the committee made it quite clear that members of the armed forces need have no worries on this account, since they would be welcomed in their every-day uniforms as they always have been during war-time Masquerades on the campus in the past. Indeed, they need not even worry about the probability of losing their chances of winning a prize, since this year a special prize has been instituted for the uniform that, in the opinion of the judges, is the most picturesque by Canadian standards.

For the Ball this year, following their traditions of previous Masquerades, the Club is bringing in an orchestra that, although well known throughout eastern Canada, is as yet unknown upon the McGill campus.

The featured musicians this year will be Paul Phillips and his ten-piece band. Phillips has been playing in the Montreal-Ottawa area for a number of years, and numbers among his achievements the record of three years of steady work at the Seignory Club and a number of appearances at the Hunt Club. He has also played for a considerable number of private functions around the city.

An attempt is being made to destroy and then utterly disperse the humdrum atmosphere of college for this one evening, and the ball-room is to be converted by decorations gathered from the four corners of the earth, into a cosmopolitan palace fully fitted for this pageant of co-operatively internationalism. Nominations Deadline

Campus elections are coming and again they should occupy the main part of student discussion and debate. A great deal of this discussion is good and makes for a united and interested student body. A great deal of the discussion, however, can be harmful in that students do not look at the matter of election from an objective viewpoint but rather from subjective and selfish considerations.

This year, more than ever before, students should be vitally interested in this question. The campus needs strong leadership; it can no longer accept officers who are only willing to complete the minimum details which their positions entail; the campus needs men with progressive and yet sensible ideas to keep University student spirit alive even during wartime; the campus has room for only the best and most representative men.

Not only should the slate of officers be an able and representative group, but they also should be ready and willing to do the work which their positions require—otherwise they should not accept the nominations. Such students should rather help in making the proper choice of candidates.

The officers elected this year will be faced with the major problem of trying to maintain the student government which McGill has derived only through a long and tedious struggle. Students at McGill should appreciate the fact that they do have student government, and they should make sure that they nominate and elect the right type of people who realize what student government is, students who are willing to fight to see that the extent and liberty of their government is not hampered through the pressure of the war or through any other pressure that may be exercised.

A further problem of the officers elected this year will be the maintenance of a unified student spirit on the campus. This year students have been split on many main issues of policy, and many have signified their dissatisfaction of the present regime of officers. If it is true that they are, then let them awaken and see to it that such a slate of officers is not again elected and is not permitted to represent a revolting student body.

The deadline for nominations is tomorrow. It is the duty of every student to make sure that enough students are nominated to the various posts in order to ensure that the right type of man is elected, in order to ensure that he is representative and that he has the backing of the majority of students.

It is the duty of every student to think before he signs a nomination sheet. He must not be inveigled either by argument or by pressure of friendship to sign a nomination of a person whom he thinks will not do a good job. If he does not know the person ample opportunity will be given to him through platforms in the "Daily" and through an open meeting of the students to meet the candidates and so enable them to become well acquainted with their ideas and their views. Finally, it is the duty of every student now not to let down the students of the future who will have to bear the consequences of bad campus leadership, and also not to disappoint the students of the past who were interested enough to develop the present system of student government at McGill.

Theatre Notes

"THE WAR AGAINST MRS. HADLEY" ... AT THE CAPITOL

Few motion pictures reflect real and lasting credit on the producing studio or on the industry as a whole; but "The War Against Mrs. Hadley" scores for MGM a triumph based not on spectacular appeal but on timely and timeless sagacity. It is a moving, vivid study of the honesty and sincerity of isolationism; for it pierces the outer shell of political non-intervention to strike forcefully at the basic, most implacable of all isolationists—the mothers of the youths on whom the weight of fighting falls.

Mrs. Hadley is a Washington widow whose ample means have long maintained an attractive, spirited daughter and a son who bears no sense of responsibility towards his semi-sinecure in the War Department. The tragedy of Pearl Harbour disrupts her birthday celebration and brings the war directly into conflict with every emotion of her strong-willed character; for suddenly she finds her son sent off to battle and her daughter married to an air-corp sergeant whose family are far removed from her own lofty social plane. It is in the development in this woman of a consciousness that the ideals for which her son has become proud to fight are of far greater moment than her own maternal emotions, that the picture reaches a dramatic height of impressive intensity.

Fay Bainter brings to the title role a magnificent interpretation. Here is a study of a woman of good culture and acute social consciousness, a firmly cast character lacking the humanity of graciousness and wont overlong to bear a grudge, and a mother of the old school holding fast to the concept of filial duty and her right to govern her children's lives. Miss Bainter gives sharp definition to every facet, changing subtly detail by detail as her philosophy is displaced and remolded by the heat of emotional conflict.

Edward Arnold plays her suitor, a major official in the War Department, with an admirable simplicity which bears extreme effectiveness; this would seem his best role since Daniel Webster in the brilliant "All That Money Can Buy." Richard Ney plays son to Mrs. Hadley as he did to Mrs. Miniver, and very well indeed. Jean Rogers as the daughter and Van Johnson as the sergeant make as attractive and well-drawn a couple as the screen has seen in a long time. Halliwell Hobbes is refreshingly excellent as the butler, and Sara Allgood contributes warm Irish commonsense with her customary capability. Spring Byington would be less boring were the local air less saturated with "moran" anecdotes; the fault is not hers.

The added attraction bears the repulsive title of "Laugh Your Blues Away," but reveals uncommon hilarity in the person of Bert Gordon (the Mad Russian) and appealing performances by Isobel Elsom and delectable Jinx Falkenburg. The script is less trite than most, and the unique Mr. Gordon is at his best. Arguments may rage on the merits and misfortunes of the double bill, but be it said that just now the Capitol has a rattling good one.

THE MUMMY'S TOMB AT THE PRINCESS

The detective fished a dead body out of a creek, examined it. "A murder," he said, in a matter-of-fact tone, "strangled to death." Three more followed in similar fashion, all strangled to death. Two, in or around their bed and the third, after having been strangled, was found hanging in a wardrobe. A fifth victim, the killer himself, was killed in plain fashion—by a pistol shot. Two additional women were burnt to death.

To lend to all this some air of mystery an occidentalised Hindu makes a few appearances and a tall butler, who looks like a diplomat, is stuck in the background. Even intellect didn't escape this hour and a half of fantastic horror. Semi-learned discussions on Yoga and medicine, trimmed by the revival of dead, were introduced in an apparent effort to lend some respectability to this killing en-masse. Recent events on the Russian front must be influencing Hollywood producers.

An interesting picture to those interested in the quantitative aspect of the murder business. If there were such who as yet did not have their fill of murders another Hollywood horror production was added to the program. Instead of an old paralysed American, a three thousand year-old mummy does the killing. All this is in the line of variety.

The background shifts swiftly from the Egyptian desert to New England. While in the former an American archaeologist, uncovering a sacred tomb offends the ancient gods of the land—whatever they might be—and their curse follows him to the very heart of New England, years later. A High-Priest is present to direct the actions of the mummy and a few beautiful women, screaming at the top of their voices, are there to soften the hearts of those who had been hardened by a grand total of eleven killings.

Those who find McGill monotonous could go to see these films so as to become convinced that there is still some excitement in the world somewhere.

AT THE PALACE WHITE CARGO

Why Hollywood still insists upon wasting good talent on ridiculous stories is still one of the unanswered mysteries of that great city. If it is one of the exigencies of the war, then let us have fewer but better pictures; if it is copyright difficulties, then why not produce classics which require no copyright payments. There is certainly no dearth of stories pleasing alike to those whose tastes require melodrama, as well as to those who enjoy the sophisticated comedy. You have the talent gentlemen, you have the stories why not use both to best advantage.

White Cargo is a case in point. The cast was delightful without exception but the story is one that even a school boy of 15 would be ashamed to hand in to his master as his own creation. It concerns a rubber agent in Africa who, becoming hardened through his environment, mistreats anyone and everyone, including an enticing native girl "tandalo" (Hedy Lamarr, who is made to look as glamorous as a cucumber.) The story is really quite ridiculous and characters most inconsistently drawn.

Frank Morgan, however, portrayed the character of the drunken doctor admirably.

The rest of the program at the Palace maintains its usual high quality, and includes a Passing Parade, a short musical, a cartoon which was very good, an Our Gang Episode, and of course a news reel.

Abraham Lincoln, the Inspirer

Born near Hodgenville, Ky., 12th Feb. 1809.

An Appreciation of Lincoln on His 134th Birthday Anniversary

By A. J. LIVINSON, M.A.

Abraham Lincoln has been extolled for his many virtues and character, but few, if any, have praised him adequately, or at all, for one of his greatest mystic qualities, namely, Lincoln, as an inspirer of men and women throughout the world.

In his lifetime Lincoln was as much hated as he was loved, but he did not know why he should be hated, and he was humble and contrite enough not to care to know why he was loved. His mannerisms and humorous sallies, his executive and military orders whilst President of the United States, his civilian and domestic sides, his political and spiritual ponderables, his chasms and orations, his layman's and professional life, all these and many more have been touched upon and written upon by eminent writers and commentators. Though vast libraries of Lincolniana now form the story for ages to come of Lincoln, much yet remains to be said and written.

We have been told about the many and varied influences that went to make up his character and his career, and the big part played in his life by the consideration of his step-mother Sarah Bush Johnston Lincoln. Her encouragement helped to make a real man of him. It was, however, the climate of the expanding Nation and of the pioneer American way of life, as well as his persistent curiosity, power of observation, and his unquenchable will to self-educate himself for bigger and better things of the unknown to-morrows, that made him what he was, and became—the sacred ambition of ever American lad—the President of the United States.

Having said this and thus having paid a tribute to Lincoln, there remains to be said that which we set out to say about this titanic figure of history.

The hidden powers of Lincoln were such as in his day he inspired his generals, after many experiments, to give the Nation victories under Sherman and Grant, and thus save the Unity of the United States; and he inspired, in a large measure, his political successors to give, (whatever mercy and magnanimity there was), to the Southern Confederacy a "welcome home" to the prodigal sons which Lincoln had intended to be free from rancour, violence, vengeance or hardships. But his characteristics did more. They inspired writers, essayists, poets, architects, historians, photographers, painters, etchers, sculptors, philosophers, clergymen, political leaders, journalists, and the forgotten man.

There is no denying that Lincoln was to many, and still is to some, an enigma, a paradox, and even a miracle: but he was GREAT. There is no denying, also, that somehow his greatness was a composite of the geniuses of a Joseph, a Moses, a Joshua, David and Ezra,—yes, and of a Jesus of the Biblical pages; and in that composite there entered the additional spirits of Aristotle, Aristides, Socrates, Charlemagne, Cromwell, Menasseh ben Israel, Luther, Swedenborg, Loyola, Bunyan, Washington, and Wellington of ex-Biblical annals. It was all this in him that inspired others. One cannot, of course point to paragraph and phrase, but the psychological element is patently there for him who cares to seek and find. It was all this, with its implications, that others strove to emulate, and did emulate, in varying degrees of success and achievement. So that in all walks of life, in guarded or unguarded moments, men and women, and boys and girls, in many lands, openly or inwardly, felt compelled to know and to be spell-bound by the story and the tragedy of Lincoln. Each became one of his countless apostles committed to the incessant battle for the enthronement of Justice, Righteousness, Mercy and Freedom in the international democratic world. They did so, and are still doing so, because, to use the words of Rudyard Kipling in his lines to the greatness of Lord Roberts, and to apply these words, in turn, to Abraham Lincoln, because Lincoln was:

"Clean, simple, valiant, well-beloved,
Flawless in faith and fame;
Whom neither ease nor honors moved
A hair's breadth from his aim."

Let us all, therefore, no matter how humble or august we may happen to be, or what philosophy of life, ethical or spiritual, we follow and cherish, take off our hats in sincere reverence to Lincoln, the inspirer, and vow, that like in his day, so in ours, slavery and strife, tyranny and wrong, shall disappear, and Freedom and Peace, Liberty and Right for all mankind, (the toilers of brain and brawn)—shall prevail.

RUMOR CLINIC Prepared by the Canadian Column

GOSSIP THAT LEADS TO THE HIGH ROAD OF TRAGEDY.

In this week's series, the Canadian Column of the Rumor Clinic, finds a particular need to deal with rumors and misunderstanding regarding "lay-offs" that seem to have sprung up in our own camp.

War workers who form a potent part in Canada's defence program should be warned against playing into the Axis game by careless talk of production and lay-offs, a game in which the enemy fits together the bits and pieces of gossip, gleaned knowledge not only of our activities, but "sore spots" on the home front. Such gossip can lead to the high road of tragedy.

War is change, and therefore production and non-production in our munition plants must change too, according to requirements. Hon. C. H. Howe, Minister of Munitions and Supply, recently made an open statement to war workers and the public, in an endeavour to clear up distorted ideas of lay-offs in munition plants, and at the same time revealing steps taken to minimize the effects of lay-offs.

Across the border, the Chief of Ordnance at Washington, Major General L. H. Campbell, directed a letter through the U.S. war plans to men and women of production lines, from which we quote:

"War as you know is fluid. Requirements of the armed forces change with change of situation. Requirements change as an army goes from the defensive to offensive operations. Strategy may dictate that every effort be made to produce ships at expense of guns, planes at expense of tanks, or tanks at expense of ammunition. When an order from the War Production Board to slow up work immediately on some particular order and speed up work on another, it is for above reasons. It is sometimes hard to understand such rapid changes, but all should do them with a co-operative spirit in order to assist the war program."

RUMOR: "What is the use of going into munitions when plants are laying off workers in droves?"

FACT: Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Munitions and Supply: "Where a program has to be curtailed because of changed war requirements, it may be necessary for a certain proportion of the employees to be laid off. It does not follow, however, that lay-offs are going to be widespread. On the contrary, the number of persons employed in war production is constantly increasing. The continually changing requirements of modern warfare make necessary, from time to time, changes and modifications in our production program."

The answer to this one, the foreman usually knows his business and "slowing up" may avoid lay-offs. RUMOR: "Women in munitions are frequently told to 'slow up' work, which seems a waste of labor and money."

FACT: Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Munitions and Supply: "The people of Canada may rest assured labor will not be wasted." This situation may be due to a lag in requirements and possible transference of workers to another plant urgently requiring help, as explained by Mr. Howe: "In order to minimize the effects of lay offs, I have instructed all war contractors, whether Government owned companies, or private contractors, to advise this department in advance of prospective lay-offs. Contractors have also been instructed to take their employees into their confidence and discuss the problem with them beforehand, in order that they may understand the situation."

"Further, we have arranged with the Department of Labor and National Selective Service for the setting up of machinery which will arrange for the orderly transfer of persons laid off, to other war and essential industries, as required. This machinery is now functioning, and I am advised has already arranged in a number of cases, transference of workers from plants where curtailment has occurred, to plants where labor is required."

RUMOR: "Why are there so many French in munition plants? Is it due to having a false certificate of ill health, so to evade going to war; with which certificate they can work in munition plants?"

Another cause of the shut-down was an acute shortage of staff."

"Of the 3,360 male students examined by the University Health Service until the end of January, 2,961 have been found fit for military training. Of the latter, 2,597 are fit for any type of service. Senior Cagers Win Third Straight as Pats Beaten

Wilson, Robinson, Delbel Lead Redmen To 24-17 Victory; Blackburn Paces Losers

By AST.

The high-flying McGill entry in the Montreal Senior Basketball League kept winging its way toward the top of the circuit as they overcame the powerful Pats to the tune of 24 to 17 in the opening game of a doubleheader played at the Sir Arthur Currie Memorial Gymnasium on Friday night. The victory moved the Redmen to within two games from the league lead, while it more firmly established them in their play-off position.

General Manager Of Local Baseball Club Interviewed

Brooklyn Setup Is Revealed To Daily Reporter BY A.S.

On Saturday afternoon, this writer, with the acquaintance of Branch Rickey, Brooklyn overlord, still fresh in his memory, stumbled into the hotel room of John MacDonald, newly appointed general manager, publicity director, and travelling secretary of the Montreal Baseball Club and gathered some anecdotes for the forthcoming campaign.

The purpose of his visit was the announcement of Fresno Thompson as the new manager of the Montreal Royals for 1943. Thompson will be remembered by Montreal fans as the scrappy infielder of the 1935 championship team of which he was also captain. Since then he had managed the Reading Club of the N.Y.P. League but not with very much success. From here he became a member of the front office executive of the Brooklyn organization.

MacDonald stated that Fresno will have no soft berth. He also added that managers will be called upon to display more ingenuity than in any season for many years. With a shorter training period, restricted manpower, every pilot will be compelled to use all of his resources to the fullest extent.

Manpower was the most important problem every club was faced with, he said. MacDonald revealed that thirty contracts were mailed out after yesterday's directors' meeting and does not know how many will be returned. He also added that the genius with which Branch Rickey conducted the affairs of St. Louis has been transplanted in fertile soil in Brooklyn. Rickey has organized a scouting staff of nine men and are right now searching for young blood and, he said, Montreal will receive many of these "kids."

The plan for the spring is to have the Brooklyn and Montreal teams train together at Bear Mt., N.Y. However, should the weather be inclement the West Point field house will be available and that is where MacDonald thinks they will probably do all of their training. This indoor athletic house is 200 by 400 ft. and has one of the largest cages in the country. It also has a dusty infield suitable for real play.

The big, smiling chap with a pleasing drawl is happy about his new job, but said his chief regret was the severance with his friends in Brooklyn. The job as general manager is a responsible one, and, especially in wartime, will test his abilities to the utmost.

MacDonald hails from Cincinnati and attended Xavier College there, graduating with an Arts degree. He entered organized ball in the early thirties with the Cincinnati Club and for the past five years was publicity director and travelling secretary of the famous Brooklyn Dodgers.

He said that the only hardship that his baseball career had imposed on him was the fact that it was trying to make a linguist out of him. Firstly, when he was brought to Brooklyn by MacPhail to learn the Brooklynese language, then in 1941 when the Brooklyn Club went to Cuba to train he had to learn Spanish in order to get his food and finally (he hopes) when he is sent here to savvy le Francis.

Incidentally when MacDonald, on being queried what he thought of Montreal, replied that he had just finished reading a novel on the city by Stephen Leacock, ex-professor of political economy at McGill, and seemed to have struck a responsive chord.

MacDonald returned to New York by overnight plane where he will resume duties at the Brooklyn Head.

Artillery Defeats Flyers 7-4 in Intramural Puck Tilt

On Friday afternoon in a scheduled intramural hockey tilt at the Forum, the Artillery downed the Flyers by a 7-4 margin, to vault into second place in the standings, one point behind the leading Navy sextet, and one up on the Flyers.

Tommy Willis was the big gun for the Artillery notching three markers for the hat-trick, while turning out a sterling game on defence. St. Jacques scored two goals to lead the U.A.T.C. snipers, while Al Knight dented the twine twice for the victors.

The contest was a hard-fought one with the Artillery holding a slight edge in the play. Doscher and Layton turned in fine games for the winners, while Johnson and Futterer starred for the Flyers.

Ward, Lockwood Secure Sole Red Tallies in 8-2 Setback

The McGill entry in the National Defence Hockey League came out on the very short end of a 8-2 score on Friday night, with the Navy sextet taking all the honours and most of the goals. The loss leaves the collegians in third place and four points behind the Sailors. In the second game, the R.C.A.F. Spitfires dropped Huntingdon Army 3-1, to retain their grip of the league leadership.

Poulton was the top scorer for Farquharson's aggregate, with three new notches on his stick, while Pee Wee Read ran him a close second with two goals and one assist. Ward and Lockwood flashed the light for the Redmen on assists from Crutchfield and Farmer.

COTC Team Leads Loop; Defeats Longue Pointe

Evans, Macrae Pace McGill Scorers; Allan Sinks 15 Points For Losers

BY AST

On Friday night at the Sir Arthur Currie Memorial Gymnasium, the McGill C.O.T.C. cage team continued its winning ways and emerged on the long end of a 40-35 count against the Longue Pointe Ordnance quintet. The victory put the Redmen into a first place tie in the league with Number Five Manning Depot, but the collegians have one game in hand over the Airmen.

The Redmen, although a more polished outfit than their opponents, had to give forth their utmost to emerge triumphant, and even then, victory was only achieved after a five-minute overtime period had been played.

Macrae Sinks Eight Points.

In the first half, the Redmen reigned supreme. Alex Macrae with four field goals, Sam Evans with three, and Lou Zalkind and Manny Shacter with two apiece, accounted for all of McGill's points in this session, while the Army scorers were Wagner, Allan, Sporn, and Bock. The half-time score was 22-10.

In the second period, the story was different. The Red team's play was characterized by weak shooting, while Buster Allan paced the Ordnance outfit with eleven points. He was closely followed by Ludwig Bock who secured eight and Ben Wagner who chalked up six.

Score Tied

The McGill efforts were quite feeble in this frame, Kaneb, Deacon, and Evans being the sole players to sink field goals, and, as a result, the score moved to a 30-30 deadlock.

Only in the overtime frame did the collegians show their true power, when the Khaki quintet was held at bay while the Red scoring was done by Zalkind, Evans, Kaneb, Schacter, and Murray.

The collegians missed the services of two of their best players when Leo Rosentzveig was promoted to the senior team and Jack Eastwood left the University to join the Navy.

Approximately one month remains in which to get into the pink of shape for any of the above events.

This is the last chance that any student will have of winning an Athletic Award for any of these sports during the current session.

With the deadline for offering professional baseball contracts, only five days away, plans are progressing as usual for the opening of the 1943 season. The baseball world received a shot in the arm the other night, at a press reception when unofficial announcements were made by such important personages, as Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, of the determination to carry on for the duration, so long as teams of nine men could be fielded. The remarkable part of the developments is the feeling expressed that the game of baseball has become such an integral part of the American way of life, that every effort should be made to preserve it at all costs.

Among others who expressed a desire to see the game maintained are Elmer Davis and Eddie Rickenbacker.

An old lady walked up to the captain of a river steamer crying, "why has the boat stopped?" "Because there's a bad fog," was the reply.

"But I can see the stars overhead," she protested.

"Maybe so?" answered the skipper, "but we ain't going that way unless the boiler bursts."

Coed Coast to Be Held at Mountain Clubhouse Tues.

Sadie Hawkins' stomp'n' soul is belligerently arriving here tomorrow night to stomppe McGill males with no holds barred. Contrary to persistent rumours Sadie herself will definitely not be present as she is conforming to war time routine. Also she is leaving no stone unturned in her home front efforts to unearth a man, 4-F, on whom she can practise her technique without being afraid that he, too, will leave his heart at the Stage Door Canteen. She has disclosed that she fully believes that her spirited soul will have enough strength to preside over the Coed Coast on Tuesday with oomph to spare. She promised to give it everything it has.

She hopes that the moon and stars (sex) will be shining down so that the poor gullibles-as-usual would not be too much in the dark. "After all," Sadie snickered over the long-distance telephone, "I always gives 'em a one minute running start." Which is pretty white of her, don't you think.

Before she said good bye to her short talk, held during the week-end, she recalled the gay days of past years when she had been serenaded into Montreal with even the train whistle shrieking "Woo woo!" We wept together as we hoped that it would be soon again when her continual one-week sanction would come forth personally of the year-long man-chase.

Tickets are on sale at $1.00 per couple, eals extra, and may be bought from class executives of R.V.C., and from gym section representatives, for Tuesday night's shindig. Chaparrons will be Dr. Roscoe, Professor and Mrs. Benjamin Higgins, Miss Elnora Adams and Robert MacKay.

tion by asking: Why are there so many English-speaking workers in munition plants? Actually plants in Ontario and other provinces heavily populated with English-speaking Canadians have a preponderance of English-speaking workers, just as plants in the Province of Quebec have a preponderance of French-speaking workers.

"For the most part, employees are recruited from districts surrounding the plants, or from centres as near to the plants as possible. True, some plant workers have received deferments on account of the essentiality of their services in munition plants. Possibly there are some defaulters from military service in plants in various parts of the Dominion.

"Under the system of checks being applied by Selective Service shortly all plant workers will have to produce a certificate which will clarify their position. The certificates will show whether or not they are medically unfit, if they are fit but have been granted deferment; if they have been discharged from the armed forces as medically unfit, etc. It is expected that this check will reduce the number of defaulters to the vanishing point."

This false rumor could start panic buying: RUMOR: "Rationing of dry goods is about to come into effect." FACT: Wartime Prices and Trade Board: "No plans have been made for the rationing of dry goods."

It has been estimated that 80% of the jobs in industry can be filled by women. and left at the Union Tuck Shop. Up to date many enthusiastic camera fans have entered the contest, stated a member of the executive. The photographs entered have been of a varied nature, covering practically every phase of college activity. There is yet a lack of R.V.C. shots; and military training is featured very little. It is hoped this will be remedied before the contest closes.

He was a shrewd business man, with many peculiarities, and a faculty of doing good in a quiet way. He had no use for office gadgets, preferring to write his own letters himself, rather than have a typewriter or telephone.

His benefactions to education were many and their exact number is not known. At McGill University, the Macdonald Engineering Building, the Macdonald Physics Building, the Macdonald Chemistry and Mining Building bear the name of their donor. The site and most of the cost of the McGill Union own the same source. Macdonald Park, where the Molson Stadium now stands, and the land and buildings of the McCord Museum are his.

benefactions too. Sir William founded scholarships in the Faculty of Law and endowed the Conservatory of Music and the Faculty of Medicine.

Turning to St. Anne de Bellevue, he built Macdonald College, and equipped it himself. During the course of construction Sir William was often present to supervise, for he had a passionate desire to ensure that every detail was carried out as he had planned.

From him too came liberal donations for other purposes. The present Seed Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture took its origin from the Macdonald Seed Growing Competitions, for Sir William's heart was ever bound up with the farm.

Help Hang Hitler

Everyone is asked to contribute to the stringing up of the Fuehrer, by pouring his cash onto the counterpoise. The expected result of this procedure will be that Hitler will be raised to undreamed-of heights. Those who make the all-out contribution of a quarter will be given a little red ribbon to show that they have done as much as can be expected of any one.

To prevent a demonstration of popular feeling, and the possible lynching of the culprit, the following are asked to be on guard at the stated times.

the former Sir George Williams Training Corps, and concluded by drinking a personal toast to the success of the corps in their new billet.

Sergeant Instructor Heath and 2nd Lieutenant Redmond, former instructors of the college corps, also attended the supper, Sergeant Heath having just returned from a period of instructing the WACS.

The toast to the King was proposed by Lieutenant Chapleau.

Following the playing of God Save the King by Gunner Ross, who had previously rendered some solos on the piano at the request of Captain Ford, the parade was dismissed for fifteen minutes with orders to reform at the Drummond street entrance of the "Y."

The Corps arrived at the Craig street Armory of 2nd Medium Battery at approximately 9.40. The salute was taken by Lt. Col. Holland as the 2nd Medium Regiment stood drawn up at attention to receive the Georgians. The College corps were then issued cap and shoulder badges and after a word of greeting from Lt. Col. Holland were dismissed.

Future parades will be held on Wednesday and Friday evenings from 8.40 until 10.00 p.m.

Zoology Movies Will Be Shown This Afternoon

Scenes around a mid-forest water-hole show a great variety of animals, including monster elephants, agile cheetahs, and imperious lions training their tawny cubs in the ways and ruses of the perilous jungle existence. Native dancers in their complex gyrations give considerable colour and an interesting comment on current

American customs. Other sequences depict native girls fishing with nets in the swift-flowing currents of boulder-strewn rapids, and nimble pygmies building a swaying bridge out of simple jungle materials high above a broad, deep river.
